This worksheet of art is a template for creating your own painting in the Mondrian style. Photo © 2004 Marion Boddy-Evans. Licensed to About.com, Inc. The color exists only by another color, the dimension is defined by another dimension, there is no position, except for opposition to another item. - Mondrian Create your own version of the Mondrian geometric image using this numbered diagram as a template. Think Piet Mondrian and think about large images with asymmetric rectangles of basic colors on a grid of strong black lines. It is hard to imagine that he started out as a landscape painter and was influenced by Fauvism, Symbolism and Cubism en route to his distinctive abstractions. To survive, Mondrian was a painter of flowers on porcelain practically all his life. Perhaps this explains his hatred of nature. ... [Mondrian] suppressed curves and all the greens because he reminded him of the trees he hated. ... In 1924, the artist broke away from Theo van Doesburg, who ... maintained that the oblique line at a slope of 45 degrees better corresponds to the dynamism of modern man. (Art of Our Century, by Ed Jean-Louis Ferrier, page 429.) You will need:• Print the template.• Paint in the following colors: black, white, red, blue.• Brush. It may prove easier to use a large and small brush for large/small areas marked from 1 to 3. Or a separate brush for colors from 1 to 3. What you're going to do:• Print the template and paint it directly, or use it as a guide to mark lines on a larger piece of paper or canvas.• Decide which colors you'll use for numbers 1 through 3. Black should be reserved for areas marked as 4.• Paint in each area of the designated color, ensuring that the lines are straight and that the colors are not placed in the wrong areas. Tips:• For perfectly straight lines, use masking tape to make sure the paint doesn't drift where it's not greedy.• Instead of painting in black stripes, buy black adhesive tape and put it away instead. Be sure to buy it in the right width, because it is difficult to evenly cut the length of the tape in half. Healthy meal plan: One week of meals do you need tips in the food department? When children study grammar, one of the most basic lessons they learn is parts of speech. This term refers to the category to which words are assigned based on how they function in a sentence. Knowing and understanding parts of speech helps children avoid grammatical errors and write more efficiently. English grammar consists of eight basic parts of speech: Nouns: person, place, thing or idea. Some examples include a dog, a cat, a table, a playground and freedom. Pronouns: The place of the noun. You can she instead of a girl or he instead of Billy. Verbs: Show the action or state of the being. Verbs contain the words run, look, sit, am, and is. Adjectives: Description or modification of a noun or pronoun. Adjectives provide details such as color, size, or shape. Adjectives: Describe or modify a verb, adjective, or other adjective. These words often end in -ly, such as fast, quiet and quiet. Prepositions: Start phrases called prepositional phrases that describe the relationship between other words in a sentence. Words like that, this and between are prepositions. Examples of their use in the sentence are: The girl was sitting by the lake. The boy stood between his parents. Conjunctions: Combine two words or clauses. The most common conjunctions are , but also or. Exclamation marks: Show a strong feeling. Often an exclamation point appears after them, such as Oh! or Hey! Try some fun activities with your kids to help them learn to identify each part of the speech. One activity may be to use a different colored pencil for each part of the speech and highlight it in old magazines or newspapers. Print these parts of the speech sheets so your children can complete them: Beverly Hernandez takes the time to discuss part of the speech with her students or children.
